

54
55

IMPRÖMPTU. By a Young Lady.

OF Liberty, Reform, and Rights I sing,
Freedom I mean, without or C——h, or K——g,
Freedom to seize, and take whate'er I can,
And boldly claim my Right—the Rights of Man;
Such is the blessed Liberty in Vogue,
The Liberty in short to be a Rogue—
The Right to pay no Taxes, Tythes, or Dues,
The Liberty to do whate'er I choose;
The Right to level and reform the Great;
The Liberty to overturn the State;
The Right to break through all the Nation's Laws,
And boldly dare to take Rebellion's Cause:
The Liberty to raise a Mob or Riot,
(For Fame and Plunder ne'er were got by Quiet)
The Right to take by Violence and Strife
My Neighbours Goods, and (if I please) his Life—
The Liberty to riot in profusion,
When all is Bloodshed, Rapine and Confusion,
Let all be equal! every Man's my Brother!
Why one have Property and not another?
Why suffer Titles to give Awe and Fear?
There shall not long remain a British Peer!
Nor shall the guilty now appalled stand
Before the mighty Judges of the Land.
No Judge—no Jury—shall there longer be!
Nor any Jail! but ev'ry Prisoner free—
All Law abolish'd, and with Sword in Hand
We'll share the Property of all the Land.
Then Hail to Liberty, Reform and Riot!
Adieu Contentment, Safety, Peace and Quiet.